TECHIE MUSINGS

The Musings, comment and opinions of a techie.

« Linux and Enterprise messaging | Main | Unix command fun »

June 09, 2003

HOW DATABASES CHANGED THE WORLD

I've just spent an hour and a half watching a presentation from the Computer History Museum: How databases changed the world. Featuring some big names from the database world: Chris Date, Herb Edelstein, Bob Epstein, Ken Jacobs, Pat Selinger, Roger Sippl and Michael Stonebraker, with moderator George Schussel.

Quality stuff, if with a little long winded introduction (45 minutes!), and some wonderful thoughts, ideas and comments. If you've got the time, worth watching.

Posted by richard at June 9, 2003 06:22 PM | TrackBack

Comments

Post a comment

Name:

Remember personal info?

○ Yes   ● No

Welcome to Techie Musings
See the links below for more webpages, or visit the main page

CONTACT

You can e-mail me at richard [at] leyton [dot] org, or post a comment.

I'm also on the following IM id's:
AIM: rleytonbofh
Yahoo: richardleyton
ICQ: 56641722
MSN: richard [at] leyton [dot] org

SEARCH

Search this site:

Search

RECENT ENTRIES

- Bash gt logic broken
- Successful Powerbook surgery
- Useful and free Mac Applications
- iMac G5 - initial impressions
- iMac G5 arrives... apparently
- Microsoft doesn't Get It
- Updated PGP key
- UK iMac G5 shipment starts
- Changing DTS package ownership
- iMac internals
- Implementing Google Adverts
- GIMP for Mac OS X
- Sun's ZFS: Boiling the oceans
- Java Quake
- Wolf5k

Email Address:

URL:

Comments:

Preview   Post

- Firefox release
- Another Techie Musings…
- Apple renaissance
- Elegantly preventing deep linking
- iMac design Q&A